MATERA

The city is known the world over for its historic Sassi districts, making it one of the oldest inhabited cities in the world. The name Sassi identifies the two main districts that make up the historical centre of the city of Matera, obtained by working the local tuffaceous stone. Partly excavated and partly built, these precious rocky complexes have been inhabited since the dawn of prehistoric civilisation.

In modern times, the effect of nature's influence is evident in the use of organic shapes that recall and refer to nature itself.

The small tables made for the city of Matera are intended to recall the caves of the 'Sassi', almost recalling a prehistoric yet modern style.

Milan is extremely dynamic and this is also evident in the buildings that are designed to decorate the city every day. Milan's skyscrapers are just one good example of how the Lombard capital aims high and at modernity. Inspired by the modern architecture that is increasingly springing up in the city of Milan, one example is Piazza Gae Aulenti, a true symbol of the city that is changing and looking to the future.

Soft and dynamic lines, cool and reflective materials are the keywords that best describe the table inspired by the city of Milan

PALERMO

(my home town)

A city full of duality, where behind tufa façades are concealed precious decorations, opulence and nobility. The historic centre is divided between markets and golden churches, all coexisting synergistically and harmoniously.

Palermo is female, characterised by the soft lines of its domes; it is nature, with its crystal clear sea and rocks.

The coffee table recalls the curved movement of Palermo's domes, where on the outside the material is rough, almost 'poor', but on the inside, concealed, it is golden and opulent.

FRA SAS SI

The Frasassi Caves complex in the Marche Apennines is one of the grandest and most fascinating underground routes in the world. An uncontaminated, hidden and beautiful environment, made up of evocative spaces and rich in extraordinary concretions. Colossal dimensions and transparent concretions resembling crystal ornaments are reflected in fairy-tale lakes. The coffee table wants to recall the forms of nature through its soft shapes and highlight two different types of materials and surfaces, the feet become like stalactites hanging from the table top.

FIRENZE

Florence is one of the most famous cities in Italy for its artistic heritage. Michelangelo Brunelleschi, Leonardo Da Vinci and Galileo Galilei are personalities who lived in Florence and made their creative flair known.

Florence, like the whole of Italy, has experienced a long history and many artistic contaminations.

Architecture was a reference element in the design of this duo of coffee tables, where the fundamental element is the two-colour scheme that characterises the city's most important architecture.

ROME

Rome, the capital of Italy, could not go unmentioned. Like so many other Italian cities, Rome is characterised by a very ancient history and world-renowned architecture.

These include, for example, the Colosseum, which remains the largest amphitheatre in the world, built at the behest of Emperor Titus Flavius Vespasian in 70 A.D.

Or more modern architecture of political origins such as the 'Palazzo della Civiltà Italiana' is one of the symbols of EUR, and is considered the architectural icon of 20th century Rome. The imposing building is also known simply as the 'Square Coliseum'.

From this history comes the design of the two small tables, solemn monoliths in Travertine (a Roman material par excellence) characterised by these arches carved symmetrically into the block of material.

LA SPE ZIA

La Spezia is often seen as a point of departure or transit to smaller, picturesque places in the region. The small seaside village with its towers close together almost forming an impassable barrier, the 'Palisade', is characterised by houses coloured red, pink, yellow and blue. It is not for nothing that the Gulf of La Spezia, at the end of which lies Portovenere, is called the Gulf of Poets. Because this stretch of coastline with its villages has, since the late 19th century, attracted writers and poets who have drawn inspiration from these places: Montale, Lord Byron, Dickens and Virginia Woolf. The base of the coffee table is intended to recall the narrow houses of the seaside village, selecting a more refined colour scheme suitable for furnishing a flat.

NAPLES

Naples is the largest seaside city in Italy and among the largest and most famous in the Mediterranean. It is home to a large and prestigious commercial port, one of the busiest and most active in the world.

The semicircular shape that characterises the foot of the table is inspired by 'Piazza del Plebiscito', one of the largest squares in the city and in Italy.

Of Naples, one cannot fail to appreciate its view of the sea. The predominant colour is the blue of the sea, which is echoed both in the foot and in the bush-hammered glass that recalls the gentle movement of the waves.
